1. What exactly is LAUNCH?

LAUNCH: The transition from strategic design to real-world activation.

It is the stage where an individual or organization moves from having a documented vision and execution architecture to initiating the activities, commitments, projects and operations that bring the vision into reality.

The central question is:

Have you actually started doing what you designed, or are you still preparing to start?

2. Seven diagnostic questions for LAUNCH

New pillar

Rate each statement from 1–5 using the existing RISE scoring scale.

1. I have identified and committed to a specific initiative, project, business, programme or undertaking through which I will begin realizing my vision.

2. I have established a definite launch date or commencement milestone and a clear scope of what will be launched.

3. I have mobilized the essential resources, people, partnerships and capabilities required to initiate the undertaking.

4. I have secured the necessary approvals, permissions, funding, infrastructure or operational arrangements required to commence.

5. I have communicated the launch to the relevant stakeholders, beneficiaries, customers or target audience.

6. I have initiated actual operations, delivered the first service or product, implemented the first project, or commenced the first measurable activity.

7. I have established a mechanism for monitoring the initial performance, collecting feedback and addressing challenges encountered after commencement.

Expected destination: The participant has moved beyond planning and has initiated a real undertaking that contributes to the realization of their vision.

3. Parameters for determining whether someone has actually LAUNCHED

This is the most important part. I recommend seven launch validation parameters.

Parameter	What must be demonstrated?
1. Defined undertaking	A specific initiative or project has been selected and scoped.
2. Commencement	An actual start date or commencement milestone has been met.
3. Resource mobilization	Essential resources and people have been secured.
4. Operational readiness	Critical approvals, infrastructure and arrangements are in place.
5. Stakeholder activation	Relevant people have been informed and engaged.
6. Actual execution	At least one substantive deliverable, service or operational activity has occurred.
7. Performance tracking	Initial performance and feedback are being monitored.

4. What counts as evidence of LAUNCH?

The evidence will depend on the kind of vision being pursued.

About Us | The Coaching Academy

Personal development or social impact vision

- Programme or initiative designed.
- First participants or beneficiaries engaged.
- First intervention delivered.
- Initial feedback and results documented.

Community Grocery

Ministry or community vision

- Initiative approved and communicated.
- Volunteers or relevant leaders mobilized.
- First outreach, service or intervention conducted.
- Participation and outcomes recorded.

5. The LAUNCH completion standard

I recommend distinguishing between being launch-ready and having launched.

- Launch-ready: The architecture, resources and operational arrangements are sufficiently prepared.
- Launched: The initiative has commenced and at least one substantive deliverable has been produced.
- Validated launch: The initiative has commenced, produced evidence of delivery and established an initial feedback and monitoring mechanism.

A participant should not receive LAUNCH completion merely because they held an opening ceremony, announced a business, created a social media page or registered an organization.

Those can be launch activities, but they are not sufficient evidence of actual operational commencement.

6. Revised RISE assessment architecture

We now have nine pillars, not eight.

Pillar	Questions	Maximum score
Identity	7	35
Clarify	7	35
Crystallize	7	35
Articulate	7	35
Architect	7	35
Launch	7	35
Build	7	35
Scale	7	35
Lead	7	35
Total	63	315

63 diagnostic questions

9 pillars × 7 questions each

315 points

Maximum possible score

7. An important strategic distinction

I would establish these definitions as the governing logic of the entire methodology:

- IDENTITY: Who am I?
- CLARIFY: What matters?
- CRYSTALLIZE: What future do I envision?
- ARTICULATE: Can I communicate it?
- ARCHITECT: How will I achieve it?
- LAUNCH: Have I initiated it?
- BUILD: Can I produce consistent results?
- SCALE: Can I multiply the results?
- LEAD: Can I develop others and sustain the impact?

One final challenge: don't let LAUNCH become another planning stage. Its defining evidence must be action in the real world.

My proposed RISE philosophy: Discover yourself. Define your direction. Design your future. Declare your vision. Engineer your strategy. Launch your undertaking. Build your capacity. Scale your impact. Lead your legacy.

If you want, I can:

- Develop detailed assessment questions for the LAUNCH pillar
- Design validation criteria checklist for confirming LAUNCH completion
- Integrate the LAUNCH pillar into the overall RISE scoring system
